PENNSYLVANIA TOLEDO GROUP LEADS DIVISION

Wins Hamilton Safety Trophy By Reducing Accidents on Line

By holding injuries down to only eight on the entire division, employees of the Toledo Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad, of which Marion is a part, led the Western Region for the record-breaking month of December and grabbed the T. B. Hamilton safety trophy. This division hung up the excellent mark of 68 per cent, having had 28 injuries in December, 1932.

Two divisions, in addition to the trophy-winning Toledo branch, made a desperate effort to hang up the best safety record in December and both made a percentage of above 63. The St. Louis Division was second in the standing with 10 injuries in December, 1932, as against 28 in the corresponding month of 1932, for the reduction percentage of 64.3. Chicago Terminal came third with 63.8 per cent reduction.

Credits Supervisors

The winning of the T. B. Hamilton trophy by the Toledo Division has demonstrated that the safety movement, the reduction in lost time accidents, is a co-operative enterprise. While the safety agent, or the man in charge of the safety work on a division, may play a prominent part in stimulating safety among the employees, there is only one place to give the credit for the winning of the trophy, says an article in the Pennsylvania Magazine.

That is to the supervisors and employees who have shown that by co-operation in safety work, and by their belief in safety, the accidents on the division were reduced.

Reduction Shown

Pennsylvania employees on the Western Region, by an onslaught on personal injuries, showed a reduction for the entire year 1932 of 29.2 per cent over 1931. Injuries were chopped from 4,861 to 3,412. The Toledo Division and Marion are a part of the Western Region. The Toledo Division was sixth in the actual number of reportable injuries to each 1,000 employees in service for the year among Western Region divisions. Grand Rapids Division headed the list.

Continues Work

Hocking Valley workmen yesterday continued to work in the vicinity of the Union Station, repairing and rebuilding tracks.

Work Resumed To Start

Work of laying the new 100-pound rail in place of the present 100-pound rail on the main Hocking Valley track from Marion north, for a distance of about seven miles will start noon. It was announced today. Rail has been unloaded along the way.

On Schedule

All passenger trains operating through Marion have been on schedule time so far this week, it was reported today.

Children's Night Coughs

Stopped Almost Instantly

Children very frequently have spells of night coughing due to bronchial irritations or while suffering from colds. These coughing spells, if not quickly checked, are very injurious to the child's health, to say nothing of the annoyance to others.

A famous physician's prescription called Thosine much better than patent medicines and cough syrups acts on a different principle, relieves the irritation and stops the cough in a few minutes. In fact it is guaranteed to stop night coughs or sore throat within 15 minutes or money back. Contains no chloroform, dope or other harmful drugs, pleasant taste and safe. 35c, 60c and $1.00. Sold at Bradley's Drug Store, Weimer's and all good drug stores.—Adm.

HAD RHEUMATISM FOR MANY YEARS

Got relief at last with simple home treatment

A martyr to rheumatism for almost a lifetime, a man from Wyocena, Wis., writes that he can always get relief with a simple home treatment.

"As a man of seventy, for years a sufferer from rheumatism, I want to give my recommendation for Sloan's Liniment." "It is a fine remedy and will do all that is claimed for it."

Sloan's has been the standby of rheumatic sufferers for years because it doesn't just deaden the nerves. It helps the body to throw off the germs and poisons that cause the trouble by speeding up the circulation right in the affected spots.

Apply a little lightly, without rubbing. Immediately you feel a warm glow of comfort. Still joints and muscles limber up. The aching stops and soon you are completely free from pain. Get a bottle today. All druggists—25 cents.

Daily Proverb—"He that makes himself a sheep shall be eaten by the wolf."

Mr. McAdoo has made plain to the country that the story about the buying of that cabinet was wholly mythical.

The most nauseating phase of these sensational court cases, usually, is that those responsible for the fifth seem to be proud of it.

There is ample excuse for the return of suspensors to popularity. Belt straps have been made to sustain, in recent years, far more than they ever were intended to bear.

Browning says he wanted children, and as evidence of his good faith it may be pointed out that he adopted two and married that dear little 160-pound child, "Peaches."

There's no question but what Tris Speaker will materially strengthen the Washington team—provided, of course, he doesn't succumb to the reprehensible habit of betting.

If that court decision stands in the Columbus case, we can furnish a list of about seventy Ohio cities and villages on which Columbus will have what is vulgarly referred to as "the lough."

Still, considering the fact that Florida's real estate boom has gone bloomy, it's not so surprising that we are asked what we are for a small box of her strawberries. They have to take out an assistance some way down there.

The government of Mexico has the nerve to claim that it has been friendly in the past,
right in the face of the fact that it let Almedo McPherson escape that time she was kidnapped
and taken down there.

The federal house ways and means committee has rejected the proposal for federal distilleries by a vote of eight to four, possibly figuring that no government has any right to play favorites.

When dirty papers refrain from reporting
parts of dirty cases because such parts are too dirty to print, it goes to show that they lack the courage of their convictions.

The Indiana house has passed an amendment to the automobile law to increase the speed limit from thirty-five to forty miles an hour, possibly to prevent the law-abiding motorists
from getting run over.

Even a blind man should be able to see, in the disgusting Browning case and its still more disgusting treatment by the New York tabloids and many newspapers, another evidence of the fact that all such cases should be heard in private.

"I see that it has been demonstrated out in California that if you get enough mice they will drive away cats," remarked the fellow who lives next door on the way down this morning, "but the item failed to tell where one could get enough mice."

Representative Johnson, of Kentucky, declared on the floor of the house, a day or two ago, that bootleggers wait in the lobbies of the capitol while their cards are taken in to members. "We can't see anything remarkable about that. Nobody has ever accused the bootleggers of not being accommodating in business matters."

Trend Away from Mansions.

Succumbing to the trend of the times, another great New York City mansion, one of the largest and certainly the most ornate, is about to disappear to give place to a do-luxe, twelve-story apartment building. The massive pile of granite and plate glass pointed out to visitors in the city by the conductors of the rubber-neck buses as "Clark's Folly" has been sold to a New York contractor and builder for $3,000,000.

When Senator William A. Clark, the one-time Montana copper king, now deceased, built the mansion, which is far more like a French chateau to its exterior architecture than anything American, it cost him $4,000,000, exclusive of the site, which is estimated to be worth over $1,000,000. It has a frontage of seventy-seven feet on Fifth avenue and a depth of 200 feet along the north side of Seventy-seventh street. It has 121 rooms, exclusive of twenty-six rooms for servants, thirty-one bathrooms, a theater, a swimming pool, four art galleries and a number of dining rooms.

We said in our opening paragraph that it was soon to succumb to the trend of the times. The explanation of this trend may be had in the twenty-six rooms for servants mentioned.
To care for such a place as an immense staff of household help is necessary and the supply of household help is dwindling every day with a corresponding increase in pay to those who get all such employment. Hard to get and often inefficient, the problem of holding household help has become so great that even the very wealthy are unwilling to stand either the difficulty of retaining a staff or the exorbitant cost of maintaining such establishments.
They are selling out and building small homes,
or occupying apartments, where the cost of help is negligible compared with what it was in the mansions they vacate.

Honest Work Never Led to Crime.

We were very much pleased to be able to publish on this page, Thursday, the communication signed by two Marion mothers on the subject of juvenile crime and the chief cause leading thereto; not pleased that there was occasion to publish such a communication, for we regret that, but pleased because these mothers unquestionably have hit upon what is beyond doubt the cause of much, if not the greater part, of the crime committed by the youth of the land today and brought it right home to the fathers and mothers of our city. There no doubt are contributory causes such as the instruction in crime afforded by the movies and the sensational exploitation of crime in the newspapers and magazines, many of which appear imbued with a desire to throw a glamour over criminals and crime, but, as these Marion mothers hold, the chief cause of juvenile crime today is the idleness, often the enforced idleness, in which the boys and girls of today are brought up.

Thirty or forty years ago boys were taught and encouraged to work. As a matter of fact, it was held discreditable if they did not work.
Every boy and many of the girls were expected to get their spending money that way.
Many not only did that, but also clothed themselves. But today such is not the case. Work by the youth of America is in large part discourage. Boys and girls are brought up in idleness. Their very idleness adds to the opportunity to spend money, the demand for spending money being far greater today than it was three or four decades ago. They look to their parents for spending money. The children of the well-to-do may—we do not say do, but may—get sufficient for their needs from their parents. But at times all parents are not able to supply them with money. They are not able to move along with their associates
without it and so, without means from a lawful source, they resort to crime.

We do not mean that this is the general rule with the youth of the land, for it is not.
The great majority of the boys and girls of today, regardless of the position in life of their parents in a worldly way, are honest and may be trusted. Happily, the undependable, the ones lacking in those qualities which hold the majority above temptation, those devoid of the sterling qualities which make real men and women—in other words, the weaklings—
are the exceptions.

We have long thought that the parents who permit their boys and girls to grow up unacquainted with work by actual experience commit a crime. Every girl should be taught household work at least, and every boy should be taught some form of constructive labor.
There is no way to learn the value of money equal to earning it. There may be exceptions to the rule, but we can not recall one great American today who did not make work one of the stepping stones to his greatness, nor can we recall one great American for a century past who did not profit by the knowledge and experience gained through labor in one form or another.

This high valuation of the place which work should have and hold in the education of the young is by no means new to us. If our readers will bear their memories a bit, they may recall that we have urged the value of work many times before, especially while we fought to the extent of our ability a nationwide movement to make loafers and drones out of the boys and girls of the land, a movement inaugurated by union labor through selfishness and supported by a large element of the church organizations and the women's clubs of the land. When next the proposed amendment to bar all boys and girls under eighteen years of age from work of any kind at any time or place comes up before the voters—for the movement was merely de-fected, not killed—we would have the voter recall what these two Marion mothers, speaking for many mothers consulted by them,
had to say regarding idleness as the chief cause of juvenile crime.

Many suggestions for wiping out juvenile crime have been offered and many have been tried. It is evident that the idleness of youth which has been encouraged is not one of them.
Let us try honest work for a change.

Combat Physical Unfitness.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

We learned a lot from the World war. Much of this information relates to subjects not directly associated with military or naval activities. Some of it has an important bearing upon the health of our people.

In preparing for the war every prospective soldier was given a searching physical examination. I shall never forget the four hours I spent as a member of one of the draft boards. What impressed me most in this experience was the large number of physically unfit men who appeared before us.

The other day I saw a newspaper account of the report made by the hygiene expert of the Marine Illinois, schools. This recalls to us figures which were familiar a few years ago.

It was pointed out that of the two and a half million men examined for the army more than 750, 000 were rejected as physically unfit. This means that almost thirty per cent, were defective. Out of every ten men examined three were found hopelessly imperfect.

That is a dreadful record, isn't it? It ought to be a very, very uncommon thing to find a physically defective person. Three out of a hundred would be too large a proportion, but three out of ten is unacceptable.

The report to which I refer contained language
which I quote:

"Stocked by this revelation, medical scientists analyzed the causes and found them to be in a large degree traceable to the cumulative effects of infancy and through the school period. . . . We are prone to take too much pride in our having conquered the plagues of the so-called 'childhood diseases,' like diphtheria, without remembering that we have done little or nothing to guard children against the chronic degenerative diseases which were the principal cause of rejection by the draft. For instance, the death rate under twenty-five years from heart disease is as high as that from typhoid fever."

We may make progress against typhoid, diphtheria and scarlet fever, for instance, but if we fail to watch the developing child, to make sure it is properly fed to guarantee the mineral and other elements essential to its growth, we are falling far short of our duty to the child. Unless the bones, teeth, muscles and other tissues are nourished and kept in the best of condition there can not be that perfection of body which means fitness and physical ability to meet the combat of life.

We must go back to infancy and childhood if we would have the men and women of the future to be reasonably perfect. We pray there may never be another war, but if there should be I hope the physical examinations may be more satisfactory than in the last war.

ANSWERS TO HEALTH QUERIES

E. M. G. Q.—Why do men have to ejaculate more often than women?

A.—Men are more subject to catarrhs and also smoke so much more than women.

S. S. S. Q.—How can I reduce?

A.—What should a woman weigh who is thirty-six years old and four feet nine and one-half inches tall?

A.—Weight reduction is merely a matter of self-control as regards the diet. Exercise is also essential. For other particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

2.—For her age and height she should weigh about 110 pounds.

F. H. Q.—Where can I obtain lime water?

A.—This solution may be purchased for a small sum at most any reliable drug store. —Copyright,

Who's Who and Why.

DWIGHT H. DAVIS.
Dwight H. Davis, secretary of war, was born at St. Louis, July 5, 1879. Prior to the World war he engaged in a great deal of public recreation and welfare work and served on a number of commissions seeking these ends.

With the advent of the war he served as captain in the Fifth Missouri Infantry and rose through the different ranks to that of colonel in 1923. In that year, Mr. Davis became assistant secretary of war and in 1925 advanced to the secretaryship. He was also a director of the War Finance corporation.

BY GROVE PATTERSON.

If it is true, as expert gurus folks say, that thirty per cent. of all the inhabitants of our country are farmers and that they receive but seven and a half per cent. of the national income, you can't blame them for feeling crabby. It isn't often that trick bills passed by congress can cure or change an economic condition, but wise leadership can do a little country that there are statements for the problems.

A student of social conditions says "slums are places where environment is such that maintenance of the true ideals of home life and proper bringing up of children are impossible. We, thus, find, over-crowded tenements and ghettos where the children for children, turned over to nurses and servants in the homes of the very rich, may not have any better environment for the building of character than they have in hovels. The biggest influence in the home is love. It is the biggest influence on character. Children may or may not have it—in tenements or in million-dollar hotels.

You read of a student who killed himself

support, and you will find life worth while.

PAIN.

If there be pain, what of it?
It is a path from winter into spring.
It is a cloud, a shadow
On a morning that has been overbright.

You shall know pain
Because you have known rapture.
The still eddies ebb and flow.
And the young moon grows old
And young again eternally.

Pity that man
Who has not heard the rain of sorrow
Beat in his garden.

Pity that man
Who has not gathered pain
Like a loved woman to his empty heart,
Wounding and weeping it
To agony and fullness.

Pity that man
Whose eyes have not known tears
And aching in the night:
For tears are jewels
Beyond the price of rubies.

Pain goes forevermore a lonely way,
For he is spurred of men.
You know the lightning, when
When he shall visit you
Reck on and take his hand.

And say: "Come, now, and be my fellow,
And let us heal each other's wounds
And weariness."

See to it that you do not bar your door
Against his coming.
For at the last
He shall lie down to sleep upon your heart,
And sleeping pain is peace.

Some Questions of Interest Asked and Answered.

Q. I understand that recently there have been found some rails of a long abandoned railroad that were in an excellent state of preservation. Can you tell me anything about these? S. R. W.

A. Fragments of iron or steel rails were found in the ruins of the old city of St. Joseph in Florida. These were along the right-of-way of the old St. Joseph and Iowa railroad. The fact that these pieces of rail were found in the open air for more than eighty-five years aroused such interest that they have been sent to laboratories in Philadelphia for investigation.
They are smaller than those made today, but heavy in proportion. An effort will be made to determine just what they are and how they were made.

Q. What are considered the requisites for safe flying? B. E. R.

A. The Aircraft Year book says that there are six requisites for safe flying, and that all of these must be approximated before aviation can hope to exist practical business interest.
They are as follows: 1. Machine, sound economically and structurally; 2. reliable engine of sufficient power; 3. competent communicative pilot and navigator; 4. air ports and emergency landing fields, sufficiently close together to insure gliding to safety; 5. nation-wide weather forecasts specialized and adapted to the need of flyers, and adequate charting of air routes.

Q. Is Gene Tunney married? M. I. C.

A. Gene Tunney has never been married.

Q. Please give the names of the cities comprising the American league from its organization until 1903. J. H. A.

A. The American league was organized in 1900. The league first comprised three cities, Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit. The following cities were taken into the league in 1900:
Buffalo, Indianapolis, Kansas City, Milwaukee
and Minneapolis. In 1901 the league was comprised of Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Washington, Milwaukee and Baltimore; in 1902, Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Washington and Baltimore; in 1903, Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, New York City, Philadelphia, St.
Louis and Washington.

Q. Does the army operate motion-picture theaters at the various posts? W. R. H.

A. The army motion-picture service operates theaters at military posts in the United States and overseas in the Panama canal zone. During the last fiscal year there were shown 17,618
complete programs, composed of feature comedies, comedies and news reels. The attendance was approximately 4,500,000.

Q. Please name the seven vices and the seven virtues. M. E.

A. According to the latest dictionaries and sources of information the seven deadly sins are listed as: pride, forgiveness, lust, anger, glot-tousy, envy and sloth. The seven chief virtues are: faith, hope, charity, prudence, temperance, charity and fortitude.

EPWORTH M.E. IS SCENE OF SOCIETY PARTY

Home Missionary Group Entertains at Birthday Event; 225 Attend

The diningroom of Epworth M. E. Church presented a delightful appearance last night when members of the Home Missionary Society entertained with a birthday party honoring the mother society. The event marked the close of the first of a four-year birthday anniversary celebration leading to the jubilee celebration in 1930.

Covers were placed for 225 at 12 tables attractively decorated in keeping with each of the 12 months of the year. Mrs. C. J. Haver presided and was in charge of the program which followed the banquet.

Mrs. Carson, 22, sisterly presided at the January table which was lavishly decorated with all white. A snowman centered the table and guest favors were in keeping the season represented. A large red heart centered the table representing February and the same shade predominated in the favors which were nut cups filled with red candies. Mrs. Benjamin Jacoby was hostess for the February table.

Green and white in keeping with St. Patrick's Day predominated in the decorations for the March table and shamrocks were given as favors by the hostess, Mrs. S. M. Midgley. Mrs. W. C. Gentry presided at the April table which was centered with an Easter rabbit and guest favors were carried out in yellow and white. A May pool surrounded by kumple dolls centered the table representing May, at which Mrs. Homer E. Waddell presided as hostess and a miniature bridal party centered the table for June, at which Mrs. Henry B. Ruhl was hostess.

Patriotic colors were carried out and a miniature rainbow adorned the table for July with Mrs. J. J. Barnhart as hostess and Mrs. T. J. Mills as guest. Her table for August in keeping with vacation days by using a small train and depot together with a swimming pool suggestive of the season. A little red school house centered the September table at which Mrs. Frank Knapp presided and Halloween emblems and turkeys, suggestive of October, were used at the table at which Mrs. Edson L. Bush presided.

Horns of plenty

Good Start
The new year has started out in an exceptionally promising manner, however, with every indication that the company will have at least a normal increase throughout all of the 12 months. A. J. Berry, the manager, stated. The number of new telephone calls during January was larger than in any month during 1926.

The company now has 6,400 telephones in operation in the city and more than 2,100 additional in outside territory.

The Marion Water Co. reports a small increase in its list of customers during 1926, expansion having been retarded largely by the fact that some of the extensions of the city were made. A large number of extensions are projected for this year, indicating that 1927 will go far beyond last year's record. The water company last approximately 6,400 meters installed in the city.

Gas Situation
The Logan Gas Co. reports a situation similar to that of the water company. There was a small increase in the total number of gas meters installed throughout the city last year, bringing the total up to about 7,800.

With prospects of increased factory operations during 1927, which means continued increased in population, construction of new homes and tenants for homes now vacant, officials of all four local public utility companies join heads of other business firms and industries in predicting that this year will take Marion to a new high mark in all lines of development.

Steady Increase
This new high mark in The Star's city circulation has been reached following a steady increase which began in July of last year, just at the time when Marion began to recover from the period of depression which had been evident prior to that time. This is regarded as positive indication that growth and progress of the city and of this newspaper have been closely linked.

Records of The Star show that in July the average daily circulation was 6,685 and that although the vacation month of August, which is invariably a slack time for newspapers, lowered the average to 6,618, there was a recovery in September which brought it up to 6,765, followed by 6,811 in October, 6,808 in November, and 6,940 in December.

Further Evidence
Additional convincing evidence of Marion's forward movement comes from officials of the C. D. & M. Electric Co., which furnishes homes and industries of the city with electricity for illumination and motive power.

During 1926 the company's list of customers increased 507, making a total of more than 9,000 now being served with electrical power for all purposes.

The C. D. & M. records show that 7,000 dwelling houses in Marion are equipped for electricity, the largest number in history.

Using this total and assuming that the estimated average of five persons to a home is correct, it is again shown that Marion must have a population of 35,000 or more.

Normal Increase
The 507 additional customers registered on the C. D. & M. Co.'s books last year represents only the normal yearly increase that has prevailed during the last three years. However, the growth of the business of the C. D. & M. has been remarkable and is indicative of the similar growth for the community that the company serves.

In 1918 there were 2,000 homes equipped with electrical wiring and listed on the records of the C. D. & M. The latest figures, showing that there are now 7,000 electrically equipped homes, here, indicates that there has been an average yearly increase of 322 since 1918.

Conduct Survey
At one time last year, when the C. D. & M. made a survey of the city, it was found that there were 377 electrically equipped homes. These figures are being steadily eliminated. C. D. & M. officials state, who agree with local realtors who have predicted that before the close of this year practically all desirable homes now empty will be occupied.

Reports from the local telephone, gas and water companies, show that while there was no marked increase in their business last year, the prospects for 1927 are especially encouraging.

There was only a small increase in the Marion County Telephone Co.'s list of customers during 1926, due largely to unfavorable conditions which prevailed here in the early months of the year.

Against Estate Tax
Rep. Gilbert Morgan, Cuyahoga County, offered a bill memorializing congress to abolish the federal estate tax. Supporters of the resolution claimed the federal government should not invade the death tax field but should confine its taxation laws to the fields it now enters.

The present law, it was charged, "is for the purpose of forcing states to change their inheritance tax laws to comply with the laws which congress passed."

The federal law of Feb. 26, 1926, "is not a revenue measure, but a measure of coercion to require the states to increase their inheritance tax provisions," reads the resolution, which declared that matter "should be left to the states."

Ben. J. N. Ackerman, Cuyahoga County, introduced two bills, seeking to provide three grades of robbers and two grades of auto thieves, with punishment fitting the crime.

In one measure, Ackerman classifies robbers, who use force or violence, and are armed with a dangerous weapon, or are aided by an accomplice, or through the use of an auto, or seriously harm the victims or in the first degree. Such robbers are to be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than 10 years.

The cost will total about $80,000, leaving a balance of only $22,000.

Below City's Share
This falls considerably short of the city's share of the W. Center-st paving cost, estimated by City Engineer T. S. Cathers. Although the plan is to repay the thoroughfare from the Hocking Valley railway to State-st, it had been proposed to divide the improvement into two sections, constructing one section this year and the other in 1928.

The section extending from the Hocking Valley railway to Oak-st, which had been suggested for this year, would cost about $45,000, the engineer estimates, and the city's share of this would be about $40,000, or $17,500 more than the amount of money available under the bond limitation law.

Express Satisfaction
Although members of the West Center Street Improvement Association had hoped and expected that it would be possible to go ahead with at least the west section of the paving this year, all of the members present at last night's conference expressed themselves as being thoroughly satisfied with the plan and with plans for delaying the work until 1928.

They were pleased by Treasurer Queen and by City Solicitor George T. Gerson, who acted as official spokesman for members of council, that unless some unforeseen obstacle arise, the paving project will be included in the 1928 program.

Plan Paving
In the meantime, the West Center Street Improvement Association will circulate a petition for the improvement for the purpose of obtaining signatures of persons owning at least three-fourths of the property frontage on the thoroughfare.

After this petition is obtained, Council will proceed with enactment of legislation so that all preliminary details will be disposed of this year and the paving construction can be started early in 1928.

The statement made by Treasurer Queen and discussion which followed indicated, however, that finances will not permit any large improvement project aside from the W. Center-st work being put through in 1928. It was also apparent that no additional improvements of any size will be authorized for this year.

The only improvements listed thus far for 1927 are resurfacing of Columbus from Davis-st to High-st and Haines-st between Center and Church-st. Holmes-st between Orchard and Garden-st, and a number of sewers and sidewalks.

"Urgent Need"
It was the consensus of opinion at last night's conference that the W. Center-st paving is one of the city's most urgent needs and general regret was expressed over circumstances which prevent the work being done this year.

Whether the entire street from the Hocking Valley railway to State-st will be paved next year remains to be decided. There is probably, however, that the plan will be to construct the section between Oak and State-st in 1928. Most of the city officials favor this plan, believing that it will result in a minimum of traffic difficulties.

Plan Widening
From Oak-st west the street is to be widened 15 feet to conform with the width in the up-town district. City Engineer Cathers estimates the cost of the entire improvement, from the Hocking Valley railway to State-st, at $120,000, and the city's portion at about half of this amount.

Following the announcement of Treasurer Queen showing that the approximately $40,000 must be taken from the city's operating funds this year and used for debt payment, R. M. Prettymann, chairman of council finance committee, stated that he is confident this will not create any serious difficulties in the other city offices and departments.

Cities Surplus
Although all of the revenue estimated to be received by the city for operating expenses in 1927 was included in the annual appropriation ordinance recently adopted by Council, about $25,000 was set aside in contingent accounts, which can not be used without express authority from council. Mr. Prettymann indicated that council would refuse to authorize expenditure of any of these contingent appropriations unless special emergency should arise. This would still leave a shortage of $15,000 and Mr. Prettymann feels certain that this can be handled by curbing of expenses and probable earnings of the Municipal Court and other city departments.

It means that the city must keep its operating costs at the lowest possible figure but I believe this can be done without serious inconvenience," Mr. Prettymann stated.

Expenses Shortage
The $40,000 sinking fund shortage, Treasurer Queen explained, is due to failure to collect special assessments levied for street improvements. The special assessment delinquencies this year total $52,005.24, his statement showed. In addition to this thousands of dollars in assessments have been cancelled through court action and by City Council. These cancellations have been granted persons who have shown that assessments levied against them were in excess of the limit allowed by law. Property can not be assessed for more than one-third of its value.

Wages Suppression
To avoid future difficulties, Treasurer Queen recommends that whenever special assessments are cancelled or Persons convicted of second degree auto stealing shall be fined not less than $50 nor more than $200 or imprisoned from two to six months.

The Little White By Francis Beeding

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

It was late when I woke the next morning, and as I lay in bed, waiting for the inevitable Japanese servant to call me, I wondered what was in store for me during the week that must close before the fifteenth. Revolving in my mind the whole extraordinary series of happenings which had befallen me since my arrival in the Hotel de la Cloche d'Or at Dijon, I tried to put myself in the Center's place and thus form some idea of why I was imprisoned and why I might be allowed to go free after the date he had named. He had the handkerchief, whatever its strange significance might be, and he was apparently satisfied. He had quite clearly regained something which was vital to his whole scheme, but the part it played I could only dimly conjecture, for I had no idea of the precise manner in which he carried out his operations. That he was a smuggler of dangerous drugs, I knew, but how he pursued his trade, on what scale and with whom, I found it hard to imagine. I vaguely remember reading articles in newspapers about the drug traffic and occasional cases of a trafficker sentenced in some court, and I blamed myself for not having read those slender pieces of information with greater care.

Every now and then my reflections were stabbed with the memory that Chiropole was dead. I felt a lump rise in my throat as I thought of him lying hideously tortured on some cold slab in the bare morgue, smelling of disinfectants and other horrors of a lowly hospital. Presently I was aware of a low, urgent tapping on my door as of some one who wished to attract my attention secretly. My thoughts flew instantly to Patience. Was she perhaps trying to communicate with me unknown to the other inmates of the house? Suddenly the tapping grew much louder and the door was soon shaking under a perfect rain of blows. This put rather a different aspect on the occurrence, and jumping from my bed, I approached the door. As I reached it a voice was uplifted in a perfect agony of terror, but strangely rough and weak.

"Open the door, for God's sake, let me in. They are after me. They will get me."

Stabbed by this strange language and the tone in which it was uttered, I unlocked and opened wide the door. Some one rushed instantly past me into the room, and on turning round I saw, clinging to the back of the window, plucking at them in a nervous frenzy, a gaunt, thin youth in a ragged shirt and trousers, obviously terrified out of his wits. He weakly fingered the bars, crying vainly for help in the same toneless and hoarse voice which had already struck me as so strange. Then he rushed back to the door again, pushing past me as though he had not seen me, and closing it with a slam, began fumbling feverishly with the lock. He seemed, however, to have no proper control over his movements, and the key fell to the ground, whereupon he pressed his shoulder against the panel, striving with all his force as though to keep the door shut and prevent the entry of some person or persons outside.

"What's the matter?" I said in French. "What is heaven's name is happening?"

"Help me," he croaked. He was like a man in a nightmare, apparently trying to shriek at the top of his voice, but capable of nothing above this curious hoarse whisper.

"I tell you they are after me," he went on. "They'll be here in a moment. Hold the door. Help me to hold the door."

I still did not realize quite what was the matter, and hesitatingly approached this frenzied creature. As I reached him he gave a shuddering moan and collapsed in a heap at my feet, letting go as he did so of the handle of the door, which swung slowly open. I looked out into the corridor but it was quite empty, so I turned my attention to the man who had so abruptly entered. He was lying in a sort of stupor on the floor, but his eyes were open, and so far as I could see, he was conscious.

"There's no one there," I said. "Pull yourself together, man. You have had a nightmare, and I bent down to help him to his feet."

He glared at me from me with a queer, puppet-like movement, as though a string had suddenly been jerked, and crouched cowering by the wasteband.

"No," he said. "Take those claws away. You're a vampire. I can't bear it. I won't have it."

And he clutched his throat between his fingers, passing his tongue over his dry lips, his voice rustling like leaves in the wind.

I gazed with horror at this wreck of a man, and I knew now what it was that I saw, remembering stray things I had heard of the symptoms of cocaine poisoning. The poor creature was irretrievably under the influence of the drug, evidently one of Doctor Kuotta's patients who had escaped from his ward, or wherever they kept him. I debated what I should do, as he crouched muttering by the wasteband, directing glances of aversion and terror towards me. I had decided to leave the room and summon assistance when without a word he suddenly collapsed, inert upon the floor. I ran forward, and putting my arms under his shoulders, lifted his head from the ground. He was in a state of coma and, getting my arms under him, I picked him up with little difficulty, for he was emaciated to the last degree, and laid him on my bed.

He appeared to be a young man, not more than twenty-five years of age at the outside. He was, as I have already said, terribly thin and emaciated, so that I could feel his ribs in ridges under my fingers as I lifted him. His complexion was an earthy yellow, without a tinge of color. His hair was long, black and unkempt, and he had obviously long ceased to have any regard to the decencies of his appearance. His hands and the flesh round his nostrils were a dirty white color, unlike the prevailing yellow tinge of the rest of his body. He lay as I had placed him, on his back, quite insensible. His eyes were open and gazed vacantly into space. The pupils were abnormally dilated and there was a kind of film over them; and they had a hard dull look like the eyes of a dead man. His whole body was bathed in sweat, and great beads of perspiration stood on his forehead.

He must have lain there for some five minutes, I suppose, before I noticed any movement. During that time

I was quite uncertain as to what could be done. The poor wretch was obviously in the throes of a severe crisis, so much so that I felt I did not dare to leave him.

I could see no bell or any other means of summoning help. I watched him as two or three great shivers passed over his body. Then his eyelids flickered and he sighed heavily. Presently his lips began to move, and I caught rambling sentences of talk. Some of it was in an unknown tongue, but most of it was in French—the aimless wandering of a person in delirium. One thing I especially remarked. He had apparently ceased to be conscious of his own entity, and talked about himself continuously, as though seeing himself in another part of the room in the company of various shadows whom he described as being white or gray. It was ghastly to listen to him.

After some ten minutes or so, the mutterings were succeeded by another paroxysm, in which he started gasping, screaming, clutching his heart with both hands and crying out, "Je souffre, je souffre atrocement. He was evidently suffering from some form of angina. It was at this moment that the door opened and the butler appeared. He was dressed in a long white linen smock, and round his neck was a stethoscope. I looked at him in amazement.

DINNER

LILLIAN looked up at me with a twinkle in her eyes, and immediately there, did my hope that she had not caught the meaning of the question which I had chopped short at its first word. "Don't worry," she said. "I'm not going to invite you all to a delicious picnic in my small room."

"Please don't," I said miserably. "I didn't mean—"

"Of course, you didn't," she said cheerily. "I'm a d d please don't be any how because you began to ask me a perfectly pertinent question. If we're going to stage a dinner in order to foster a acquaintance between Mary Harrison and Noel Veritane, we want to make the gesture a good one. You have room enough here, but as we've already decided you couldn't have the element of surprise for Mary, which we wish. Therefore, I suggested engineering the affair, and you were perfectly justified in your sudden mental panic as you pictured my tiny suite. That you didn't get beyond the first word of oral protest is a tribute alike to your self-control and your affection for me. Take that disengaged look off your face this minute, or I won't tell you a thing about my plans."

There was not the slightest indication of chagrin in her voice and I choked out an appreciative, "You dear!" which brought a quick affectionate smile to her lips.

"Now I'll hand you out the real dope," she said merrily. "This hotel of mine, as you probably know, is a second-rate place, but it used to be a top-notch. And a room on the same floor as mine was once the last word in a luxurious private dining-room. The proprietor of the hotel, who used to be the head waiter in the days of the house's heyday, has never permitted that room to be changed, and often some of the old patrons of the place come back and engage that room for a dinner—there's more parties in New York than you'd dream. Now I happen to have a stand-in with the proprietor—he imagines I did him a good turn once—"

"What a deluded man," I glibbed, but she went on unheeding.

The Schemer

"And I can have that room any night that it is not engaged, without paying a cent. Also by picking out the dishes which are the favorites of the somewhat limited chef, I can put on a fairly credible dinner. I'll find out when I can have the room and when Noel can come. Then I'll let you know and you can plan accordingly. You'd better give me a line on your engagements and Dicky's for the next week or two, so that I can be sure they won't conflict with his date. I select. Of course Mary has no engagements."

"Neither have I," I returned promptly. "Dicky is the only one you'll have to consider."

"I'll talk to him in the morning," she said. "That leaves only one thing more to settle. There are only five of us. We need another man. But who? That's the question."

"I did not answer her, for she patiently expected to do that herself, and the next instant she went on reflectively:

"I'll Veritane won't do because he and his own are at odds; points; Hugh Grantland—Dicky would seem at the mouth if he appeared—I have it—your father has to come up here next week anyway, and I'll make it in his honor. Is that way Mary will accept nothing?"

She stretched her arms above her head and came toward the bed.

"If I don't get to sleep," she said, "I'll never be able to wake up in time to see Dicky in the morning. Good night! See her the morning."

"But long after the time I lay down," she said, "she had said."

What was the business—how to be said but to—what would compel my father's presence in the city during the next week?

ITALIANS ARE FRIENDS AGAIN AFTER SHOOTING

Gun User Agrees To Pay Victim's Hospital and Doctor Bill

Samuel Canero, 42, and Vincenzo Marsilio, 33, are again on friendly terms in spite of the fact that Canero is alleged to have shot Marsilio twice in a quarrel several weeks ago.

The fact that peace has been declared between the two former foes and that Marsilio believes that there is no reason why a couple of bullet wounds should cause him to harbor ill feeling was brought to light in Municipal Court yesterday when Canero was arraigned on a disorderly conduct charge.

Sought By Police

Canero had been sought, by police since the shooting occurred the night of Jan. 13 and yesterday afternoon he was taken into custody by Chief Thompson. It developed, however, that he had returned to the city only after peace had been effected between him and Marsilio and Marsilio had agreed not to file charges for the shooting.

The shooting occurred about 6 o'clock the night of Jan. 13 at the home of Mrs. Quintilla Siga, where the two men roomed together. Cancero is said to have fired the shot which killed Marsilio was at the City Hospital until Sunday, Jan. 30. He has fully recovered, it is reported, and is again at work at the Erie roundhouse, where he and Cancro are employed as steam fitters.

Investigation following the shooting showed that both men are exceptionally thrifty and have several thousand dollars each on deposit in banks here and in Italy.

Both men are said to be married and have families living in Italy.

Gas in the Stomach Is Dangerous
Remedies Daily Use of Magnesia to Overcome Trouble Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full, bloated feeling of indigestion is almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to serious stomach ailments. Food ferments and sours, making the distending gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any drug store a few ounces of "MAGNÉSIA" and take a teaspoonful in a glass of water, night after night. This will drive the gas, wind and bloated feeling out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its fermentation. There is no nausea or pain. "MAGNÉSIA" (magnesium hydroxide) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more gas or indigestion.—A.M.

CONCERT PLANS WIN APPROVAL OF RESIDENTS
Local Artists To Appear on Lecture-Recital Club Program Sunday

Announcement that a series of Sunday concert is to be given here under the auspices of the Marion Lecture-Recital Club has been followed by a general expression of approval from local residents and there is every indication that the project will be a complete success, club women in charge of arrangements stated today.

The first of these concerts, which will feature programs consisting of both popular and semi-classical music, is to take place next Sunday afternoon and two others are planned for the following Sundays, Feb. 13 and 20. All are to be presented at the Marion Theater.

INNOVATION HERE
Although this class of Sunday entertainment has been introduced in many cities throughout the country, there will be the first program ever given in Marion. It is anticipated that similar concerts will be planned for presentation annually.

All of the best-known local singers and musicians are to be included on the programs, many already having contracted to appear on one or more of the three Sundays. The plans, now practically completed, assure exceptional entertainment for all of the hundreds of persons expected to make up the audience at each concert.

Although the Lecture-Recital club is directing arrangements, it has been announced that the Marion County Federation of Women's Clubs is sponsoring the concerts and providing for the financing.

There is to be no admission charge and no collection will be taken, it is announced. The program will begin at 8 o'clock each Sunday afternoon and close at 5 o'clock.

RETURN OF PRINCE IS DEMAND OF QUEEN
Peasant Party Calls on Marie To Have Carol Returned to Roumania

Berlin, Feb. 4.—King Ferdinand of Roumania has expressed a desire to have former Crown Prince Carol return to Roumania, and has dispatched Minister of the Interior Octavian Goga on a special mission to Paris to confer with Prince Carol, according to a report from Bucharest reaching Berlin via Budapest today.

The report is to the effect that the Roumanian Peasant Party has served a manifesto on Queen Marie which is tantamount to a demand that Prince Carol be recalled to Roumania and his renunciation of the throne accepted.

It is expected Goga will attempt to arrange with Prince Carol for a meeting with his father, and that King Ferdinand will negotiate for a final separation of Prince Carol from his tithed harem, Amoretta, Mme. Lupescu, as a condition to Carol's return to Roumania.

A. Webb; civics, by Miss Edith Brown and Dewey Bobber; social problems, by A. F. Lantzer and Miss Ruth Starr; and commerce and industry, by Mr. Webb and Mr. Lantzer.

Civics is a required senior subject which deals with the government of the United States; algebra is a junior subject which goes more in detail about algebraic forms of computation; citizenship is an elective study which deals with the odds and ends of becoming a good citizen. History is a new elective subject, is very interesting, for it explains the past and present. Social problems is a commercial subject. If Youth But Knew

BY W. W. ATTERBURY.

President the Pennsylvania Railroad Company

PERHAPS the most valuable asset a boy can have is education and a willingness to begin using it in a humble capacity.

Fortunately for me, my father was determined that I should have a good education. He arranged for me to attend a preparatory school and then go to Yale University. In school, however, I had a row with my father. This incident taught me one of the first lessons I ever learned. I was then only a little boy and my father was a man.

After I was graduated from the mechanical engineering course at Yale, I had stretched up to over six feet myself, weighed one hundred and seventy-five pounds, had muscles well hardened by hard work and felt fit to tackle the fellow who had kicked me out of school. But when I ran across him he was not the giant of my boyish conception. He was just a little bit of a shriveled-up chap, and instantly all my thirst for revenge vanished.

Revenge Not Worth While
Then and there I decided that revenge was a thing not worth while; that it was foolish and despicable. That first lesson has guided me ever since in all my relations with men. Revenge can hurt only the man harbouring it.

After leaving Yale I went to work as an ordinary apprentice in the shops of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Altoona. Here I quickly learned another valuable lesson. The annual shop picnic was a real letter day of the men's year. There was no prohibition at that time, with the result that many of the workmen did not show up the following morning.

The morning after one of these affairs the foreman of my gang was in a better mood. He poured on me and as I was not at fault in any way, sharp words ensued. I was reported by the foreman to the shop foreman, who sent for me. Knowing I was right and that the work I did was worth more than I was paid or it, I was ready to quit if called down. I walked up to the foreman, prepared to tell him to go to blazes. Instead of calling me down, the foreman began to talk to me kindly and quietly.

Gets Sound Advice
"Remember," he said, "you came in the service of the Pennsylvania Railroad as a gentleman. Never forget that. Do not forget either that although you may not respect the man under whom you are directly working, you must respect his position and do what you are told, because he is the representative of authority. Unless you recognize authority there can be no discipline. Without discipline there can be no organization, and without organization nothing can succeed." He suggested that I go back and apologize to the foreman.

I recognized the soundness of his advice and agreed. This incident taught me two things: The necessity of discipline and how subordinates should be treated to gain their co-operation and good will.

I believe in giving men authority and freedom to exercise their own initiative. Since I have been an executive

ACHIEVEMENT DAY BECOMES ANNUAL FEATURE OF SCHOOL
A DEFINITE goal or purpose for which to work and strive is the principle on which was founded "Achievement Day" at Oakland Heights School.

This plan was first carried out in 1920 and was so successful that it has become permanent at the school. "Achievement Day" is looked forward to by every child from first to eighth grade. This day, which is observed short time before the end of the school year, is one of vivid activities and is observed as a holiday by all pupils.

On this eventful day, the rooms are uncluttered and one sees the many children grouped on the front lawn, gazing on the flag bearing the words "Achievement Day."

Each pupil strives from the very first day to attain an average of "A" in every subject, for which they receive a blue ribbon upon which is printed "Honor Student." This is an honor, and the badges are given out by Superintendent Jesse H. Mason. Each student who has had no absence during the year receives a badge of yellow upon which is printed "No Absence." A badge of white is given to all those who have never been tardy.

All pupils who have read a certain number of books in the regular reading circle list by the required time receives a diploma which contains a gold seal for every year in which the pupil has met the requirements. This circle has been in effect for the last five years and is very educational.

The presentation of these badges and diplomas is witnessed by many visitors.

Vernon Heights Club Makes Remarkable Development

What a community club has meant to Vernon Heights Junior High School can never be estimated in dollars and cents, but through determination and cooperation the developing of Vernon Heights is one of the most attractive school buildings in the city has been made possible, officials say.

When Vernon Heights was first erected few people thought of a community club. Many made statements that it could never be because of the wide range of territory covered by the school.

Through the thoughtful guidance of a few faithful mothers the first community club was formed in the early part of 1923. Officers were elected and the club began the task of beautifying and redecorating the building. This was a large task for so small a club, but it adopted the motto, "If a task is once begun, it is never finished until it is done."

Club Progresses
With this determination the club grew and progressed. A bicycle rack was the first undertaking of the club. This was obtained without a very great cost. Later on, pictures were purchased for the classrooms. One might wonder, and justly, where the club acquired all its sudden wealth. It was the result of many well planned community suppers, in which all articles were donated, thus making all taken in clear profit.

In 1923-24 the club reaches the peak of its responsibility and launched the greatest undertaking of any club of its size in the city. That was the task of repairing the grounds surrounding the school. Before this time there was no grass or shrubs. This was accomplished successfully at a cost of $700.

In 1923-24 the club reached the peak of its responsibility and launched the

The willingness to serve and not only be successful in small undertakings but in large ones as well, has led the club on, until today it is one of the largest and most progressive in Marion, it is pointed out.

Boys and girls of State Street School are becoming judges of good literature. A contest is being conducted to see who can read the most books. At the end of the year a good book will be awarded as a prize to the student whose reading has been most extensive. The books are obtained at the Marion Public Library and from State Street School Library. The work is conducted by Miss Wanda McMahon and Miss Alice Dombrowski.

SADIE BAUER, one of the greatest athletes of all time, died this week. Miss Bauer, a senior at Northwestern University, was born in 1902, when she broke the world's record for the backstroke held by Harold Krueger.

During her athletic days at Northwestern, she was a member of the world's backstroke records for women. She was on two Olympic teams and won every event in which she started. Perhaps her greatest achievement was in Bermuda in 1922, when she broke the world's record for the backstroke held by Harold Krueger.

Under the tutelage of Harbach, famous swimming coach of the I. A. C., she improved rapidly.

Miss Bauer was one of the most popular and democratic young ladies at Northwestern. Her successes never changed her disposition, nor turned her head. It will be a long time before a swimmer will be developed or a more charming personality appears in the world of sports.

STUFFY McINNIS, manager of the Philadelphia Nationals, says he needs only a small active third baseman to fill the chronic second division. Philles out of the National League wire in 1927. "Give me a good man and watch our record," is his prediction.

Returning to the scene of his former triumphs as a member of the championship Philadelphia Athletics of more than a decade ago, McINNIS already has bartered and bought new strength for almost every department.

The most notable acquisition is George Thompson, second baseman who came to the Phils from Buffalo by way of the Giants in the trade that sent Catcher Henline and Outfielder George Harper to New York. Thompson, a .300 hitter with 20 home runs last season is down for regular guard duty at second.

McINNIS will play first base when outside players are in the box for the opposition. At other times Atreanu from Norfolk, in the Virginia League, will get the call. Heible Base will be at short with a batting average of .287. General Kelly will fill in for him. General Kelly will fill in for him.

McINNIS has a quartet of slugging veterans in the outfield with G. Williams, Fred Leach, Johnny Moran and Al Nixon. Danny Sothen, who joined the club late last season, showed enough with his war club to warrant retention this year.

The Phils have three backstops. The veteran Jimmy Wynn, who was out of the club last year, has been brought back. He will be the "bum" of the man he used to work for.

Howley formerly was aide to Cobb when the "Georgia Jewel" managed the Detroit Tigers. When Howley left the team to assume the management of the Toronto International, he continued his interest in the Tigers, and several stars developed by him at Toronto last year were passed on to Cobb.

During the last few seasons Howley's team and the Tigers met in spring training games, and thus Howley and Cobb kept up the close relationship that was born in the Tiger dugout years ago.

MARY K. BROWNE, playing in the form she showed against Mile Suzanne Lenglen during the tour of C. O. Pyle's professional tennis troupe, ought to be able to beat Helen Wills, former national amateur champion, in straight sets, in the opinion of Howard Kinsay, one of the star members of the company.

"Next to Suzanne Lenglen I sincerely believe Miss Browne is now the greatest woman player in the world and in giving this opinion I am talking only tennis and not using propaganda. I think unbiased critics who have seen Miss Browne will agree with me," Kinsay said.

Miss Browne has been playing marvellously, he said. "Her many engagements on the tour against Mile Lenglen worked an amazing improvement in her game. Trained into the finest condition the speed and pace of her game increased and her back hand has become a beauty. She can now shoot the ball down the line as well as across court from both sides."

THE Pung family of Honolulu, a father, mother and ten children, challenges any family of like size to a swimming race any distance, free style. In a recent Kanaaina (old timer) swimming meet, the Punges competed in a special event and one of the children, a girl of 14, won. Pung is of Chinese birth and his wife Hawaiian. He is also a baseball player.

JOE MCCARTHY, boss of the Cubs, is feeling optimistic over the chances of his ball team for next season. He thinks his athletes should finish a little better than last year.

Joe thinks there is no chance of making any trades or getting any players that will do his club any good. He says that club managers in the big leagues simply refused to let go of any players he wanted. He will stand upon his present line up.

Speaking about the recent scandal, Joe said that it made things look bad for him for a time. "Here I was just hunting around for 20 years trying to get into the big leagues," he said, "and along comes the scandal and threatens to break up the league just when I get in."

NEW JERSEY reports the greatest killing of deer in its history for this season. The season was reduced from five to four days because a Sunday came in this period and hunting is prohibited on Sunday. One thousand, seven hundred and thirty deer were legally shot; were found dead in the woods.

Next Thursday; Managers to Sign Contracts Today

Agreement Comes After Three Weeks of Controversy About Proposed Series; Manager Bacon Sends Huge List of Players, but Announces He Will Start Games With Regulars

THE Marion Steam Shovel independent basketball team and Isaly Dairies next Thursday will clash in the first battle of a five-game series to be played between the two quintets during the remainder of the season.

This announcement was made late yesterday by Manager Marion Hinklin of the Dairies and Manager Francis W. Bacon of the Steam Shovel. The managers were to meet at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the Steam Shovel to sign the contract and flip a coin to decide on which floor the first game will be played. A number of other "minor details" also were to be settled at the meeting.

The agreement of the two managers comes after three weeks of controversy and parleying concerning where the games should be played, why they should take place, and who should take part. First action in the matter came three weeks ago when the managers met, but failed to come to terms. Since that time it has been a war for both. Now, much to relief of fans, the word battle has passed and action is about to begin.

There was an argument concerning what players the Steam Shovel should use. Manager Bacon a few days ago sent the Dairies a list carrying the names of 23 players that he might use in the series. Besides the regular team that has represented the Shovel on a number of occasions this year, the list includes a number of the greatest professional stars in the country. Some of those mentioned are Shea and Shaw of the Kinneers, Spradling and Clancy of the Firestones, and a few from the Cincinnati Wildcats.

However, Manager Bacon announced today that the Shovel would start all their games with the regular lineup. Harry Schwalb at center, Wilson and Bohyer, forwards, and Compton and Bacon, guards. If any of the professional stars are on hand, they will warm the bench at the start of the game.

The place of the first game was to be announced late today and dates of the other contests of the series will also be set.

Fredy Grim Suffers Sprained Ankle at Minnesota

Columbus, O., Feb. 4.—In quest of two more Big Ten scraps, but somewhat crippled by the temporary loss of Fred Grim, forward, Ohio State's basketball team will be on its way tomorrow to Iowa City where Saturday it will meet Iowa, and on the trip home will stop Monday at Illinois for the return game with the Illini.

Grim, who was just beginning to arrive as a regular, suffered a badly sprained ankle in the game last Saturday with Minnesota at Minneapolis. Coach Olsen has several men he can use in Grim's place, but it is uncertain who the final choice will be. For one thing he can shift Artie Tarbert from center to the vacant forward, and reinsert Ronald Hectorin at center. In a pinch he can use Robin Bell, another veteran, in Grim's place, or Fred Shuler or another of the sophomores.

MEETS HARDING FIVE IN N. C. O. LEAGUE BATTLE

Local Quintet Hopes To Break Losing Streak in Game Tonight

While no North Central Ohio League title hangs on the outcome of the Harding High and Gallon basketball tilt in the Star Auditorium tonight, interest in the battle is on the increase rather than a decrease.

While Gallon always proves a tough foe, we are optimistic concerning the outcome of the fray tonight. After losing three N. C. O. League games, it's about time for the local outfit to connect for a victory. Eventually—why not now?

Harding is no longer a second half team, at least, on the home floor. Last week, it looked far from being much of any kind of a team in the final half. Harding High tonight will take the floor prepared to fight to the finish in an attempt to break up the losing streak that has so far this season been tagging along with it during league games.

It won't be a first half aggression and it won't be a second half crew. It will be a team that will look its best during the entire contest.

All Kinds Of Records. That's the prediction coming from this department this week. The locals already have had all kinds of reverses of form this season and now that they have tasted defeat in several different capacities, it's time that they settle down and see what it feels like to win a game once in a great while.

The Harding quintet has plenty of pep and fight and if it is not completely outclassed by the visitors here tonight, will probably win. And from all advance reports, they will not be greatly outclassed, but will only be meeting a lively stepping group of experts that plays basketball—and play it with a vengeance.

The starting team for Marion will not be known until a few minutes before the game tonight, when Coach Compton gives it to the scorekeeper. Joe Hinklin is out in uniform but will likely not see action tonight because of the weakness of his ankle which was injured in practice about two weeks ago.

Starting Lineup. Bud Cram and Hughie Shultz will probably start the contest at guard with McINNICH and Garrett playing forwards. Just who the center will be is rather a difficult problem to decide. Both Gilmore and Gills have been going good at that position. "Chuck" Deane may also be in the lineup at forward when the initial whistle blows.

Among those on the Gallon basketball squad is a former Marion youth, Sawyer, who last year was a star on the Midget team here. Other personnel of the visiting outfit is unknown, although Rhinehart and Marshall are said to be two of the main scorers now on the Gallon team.

The game will start at 8:15 o'clock.

TO DISCUSS STOCK

Conference On Rogers Hornsby to Be Held Today

New York, Feb. 4.—A conference looking toward the disposal of Rogers Hornsby's stock in the St. Louis Cardinals, was expected here today or tomorrow with the scheduled arrival here of the parties concerned.

The owner of the Cardinals was due here today from Washington while Branch Rickey, vice president of the club, is coming on from Syracuse. Hornsby is scheduled to arrive tomorrow. The object of his visit is the annual baseball writers' dinner but a get-together on the stock controversy is likely.

WARRICK VS. LANGFORD

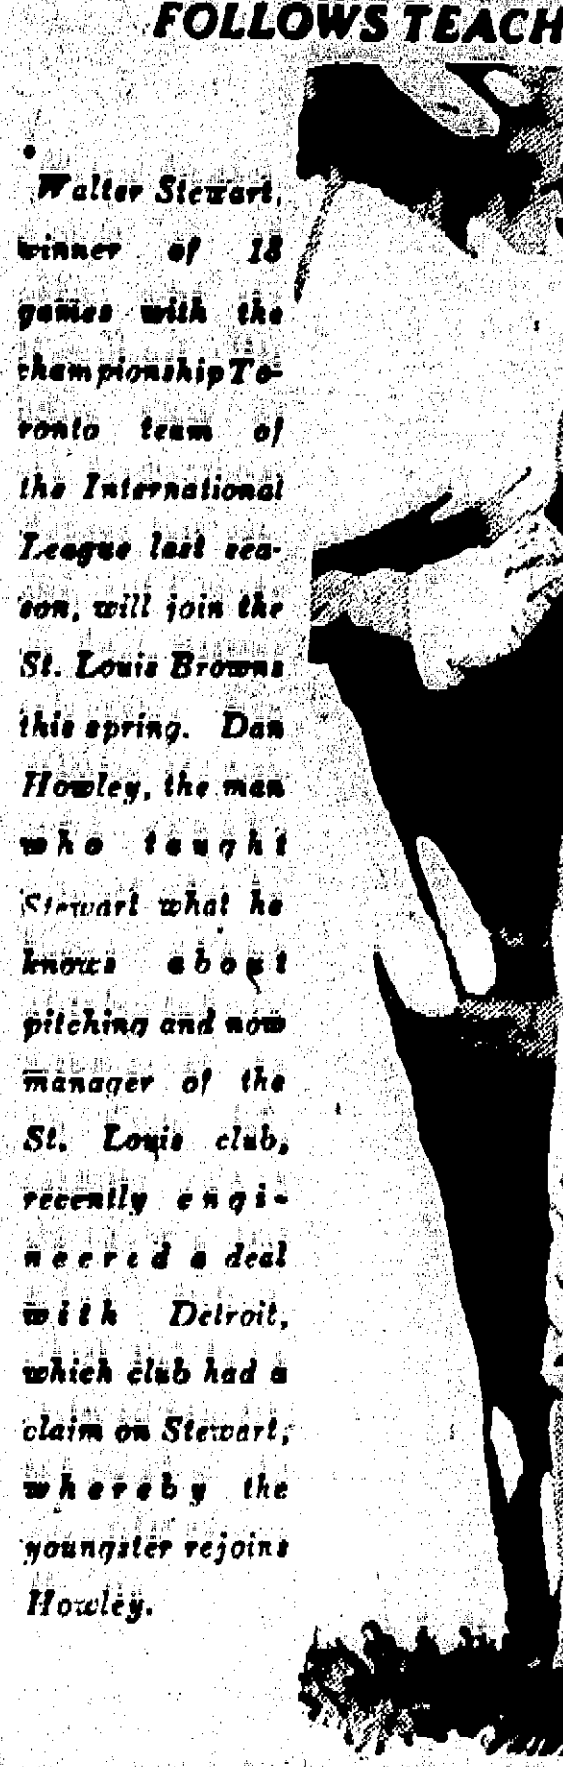

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Hobby Warrick, 158-pounder from Philadelphia, and Wollcott Langford, Chicago's dusky middleweight, will feature the double roundup of Mike Malloy's boxing show here tonight. They are scheduled to go 10 rounds to a decision.

In the other half of the double feature, George Courtney of New York will cross leather with Jimmy Mahoney, local middleweight.

One who knows exactly what ails the human race can't account for his own falling sometimes.

FOLLOWS TEACHER TO MAJORS

Walter Stewart, winner of 18 games with the championship Toronto team of the International League last season, will join the St. Louis Browns this spring. Dan Howley, the man who taught Stewart what he knows about pitching and now manager of the St. Louis club, recently engineered a deal with Detroit, which club had a claim on Stewart, whereby the youngster rejoins Howley.

Three Ohio State Teams to Invade Foreign Floors

Columbus, Feb. 4.—Victor in 30 of 40 meets in the last six years, Ohio State's wrestling team will inaugurate its 1927 campaign in the Big Ten tomorrow night by invading Indiana. The meet is in the nature of a rubber, since the squads have broken even in their four previous tilts.

While the Buckeye grapplers are at Indiana, Coach F. H. Castleman will take the wraps of the Ohio track squad for the first dual meet of the year. The tilt will be the annual indoor dual with Ohio Wesleyan on the latter's floor. The third Buckeye'sarsity squad away on a foreign invasion is the cage quintet which is slated for a joust with Iowa at Iowa City.

Mooney in Quindary

Coach Mooney, of the wrestling contingent, is in something of a quandary as to the make-up of the squad he will champion to Indiana. A year ago in a meet here the Buckeyes vanquished the Hoosiers by the one-sided count of 15 to 2. But of the athletes who achieved that victory only four are available this winter and the condition of several of the men is doubtful.

The Buckeyes are certain to be represented by Captain Ray Roshon, in the light heavyweight division; by Whitacre, Big Ten heavy champion, in the heavy class; and by Hosler, lightweight and perhaps by Wilford in the middleweight group. All four are veterans.

Wilford, however, hurt a rib early in the week and is not in the best of shape. Cushman, Buckeye, 115-pounder, has been out with tonsillitis. Lindquist will be the 125-pound entrant and perhaps Hummell or Beall will be the welterweight.

Charley Phil Rosenberg Goes on Hunger Strike for Bantam Bout Tonight

Must Weigh 118 Pounds Before He Is Considered Bantamweight and Will Probably Go into Ring Against Bushey Graham in Weakened Condition

BY DAVID J. WALSH
New York, Feb. 4.—Like everything else, hunger striking probably isn't what it used to be but we are glad to announce that, at great inconvenience and some expense, a truly representative specimen has been captured alive and will be placed on exhibition tonight at Madison Square Garden. I may be taking too much for granted, at that. Perhaps it would be better to state that Charley Phil Rosenberg was alive at last reports.

His performance, as I understand it, will be carried through without the aid of the customary jail in which his predecessors defied life or the glass case in which some of them invited death. He, in fact, will be cast bodily into the pit with a young man named Bushey Graham, of Utica, and on the billboards outside the garden the assurance is given that the proposition involves the bantamweight championship of the world.

The only trouble with that is Graham has been discontenanced as a challenger by losing to at least one contender and Rosenberg, though officially recognized as champion in some states, is not a bantamweight. If he makes 118 pounds at two o'clock this afternoon, he will have starved himself into it, according to common belief. He has spent several months in taking off a matter of ten pounds and a few days ago was said to weigh 121½. He is alleged to have done 120 yesterday but the weighing was done in great privacy; in fact, some suspect that Charles didn't even see himself do it.

To Reduce Two More. The extra two or three pounds, he expects to relinquish in the drying out process, which is done by drinking to one only with three eyes.

In view of these circumstances many of the boys have felt some justification in naming Graham as the winner, particularly at the scheduled distance of fifteen rounds. For my part, and with only one reservation, I think Graham should be a 2 to 1 shot to win. I hear he is far better than the night he lost to Cannonier and he won't have to be that good to beat a weakened Rosenberg, who, at best, is merely a pretty fair fighter.

The reservation is that all of this conversation about starvation may be the old petroleum to effect the bet. Rosenberg is trailed by a gambling crowd, some of whom are so tough that they brush their teeth with a file. They would have no particular objection to making Rosenberg a short chop if they could.

Will Try To Make It. However, I have no reason to believe that he is not having a heroic time making the weight. Neither is there any chance that he won't try to make it. One reason is that he has a $2500 weight forfeit in jeopardy; another is that he needs money badly; a third is that he automatically forfeits the title win, loss or draw; if he comes in over weight. However, the money is the most important consideration, as always.

The real champion, of course, is yet to be heard from. Bud Taylor has been elected by the national boxing association but those titles by acclamation are out like a tramp's elbow.

MIDWAYS DEFEAT PICKED TEAM IN PRELIMINARY

Boyd's Furniture of LaRue Fail To Appear on Local Floor

When Boyd's Furniture, of LaRue, called Midway Lunches at 6 o'clock Thursday night, and announced that they would not be here for the preliminary, another team was formed to oppose the Midways in the preliminary. It consisted of Shea, Irvin, O'Connell, Doug Torrence, and Andrews.

Midways won 20 to 16. Their team work was responsible for the victory while their guarding in the first half kept the opposing team from making headway. The lineup and summary was as follows:

-o- The New Book -o-

BY FRANCES JENNINGS

BOOTH TARKINGTON, one of the most versatile and thoroughly American novelists of the present day, has produced a new book, "The Plutocrat," in which his uncanny power to create humor and lifelike characters is at its best.

Mr. Tarkington is a true disciple of the goddess of variety, for in his latest book, which happens to be his twenty-eighth, he introduces a totally different type of character, an unusual background, that subverts land of mystery, Africa.

Mr. Tarkington's books are always both humorous and sad; they are "pathetically" true to life and are so much ourselves on printed paper.

"It's the Best"

The whole family agrees to never disagree on the fact that

A story progresses the trio, so distant, to the world-be American aristocrat, is continually confronting him at dinner and through the meager society afforded on the boat. The jolly voice belongs to one of America's overbearing newly-rich, a true plutocrat winning his way through his financial power, while "Honey" is his middle-class, ever-watchful wife, and "Honey" is his sullen, grown daughter with whom he is traveling in the hope that she will forget an undesirable lover.

Lawrence Ogilve finds few people of his level on the boat (all halls with light, the appearance of a beautiful blonde Parisienne, Madame Monro, and her son, Hancynthe, people of culture, grace and sophistication to arouse his waning interest in life. It so happens that the leading characters are all enroute to Africa and destined to meet many times on the way.

Ogilve obtains his introduction to Madame Monro, through the obsequious plutocrat, "Tinker," whose audacity and wealth have previously gained admittance to the lady's society. Failing under her spell the faithful young playwright determines to proceed with her on the journey. He does so and is disillusioned only when he finds that Tinker's wealth and amusing qualities contain sufficient interest for Madame Monro to cause her to keep their journey ever in wake of the Tinkers.

Ogilve is thrown much in company with the beautiful young American girl, Honey, who, in his financial and domestic life, he seeks the desire of making "Tinker" for funds. Royalties from his recent play "Save the Day" however and the book closes with Ogilve and Olivia Tinkers happily in love. Mrs. Tinker even more watchful of her prodigal husband whose affair and with "an adventurous" has only stripped him of a part of his millions, and that gentleman himself as happy as ever and still, in his gigantic, extravagant way, earning his admission to all circles.

SOME thoughtful critic has spoken of "Tinker" as "a traveling Rabbit," which he truly is. . . a wholesome, newly-rich, pleasure-loving, middle-class American.

The comedy that develops from Ogilve's infatuation for the designing Parisienne reaches its climax when, after a quarrel, she remarks, "You dear little fool! If you don't go, I'll tell you how old I am!"

On the whole Tarkington has produced a most entertaining and clever novel and one which can well be considered one of his best. A major characteristic of the book is Tarkington's splendid description of African scenery which is reminiscent of a holiday which he and Mrs. Tarkington recently spent in northern Africa.

BEST-SELLING books of last week were "The Plutocrat" by Booth Tarkington, "Tomorrow Morning" by Anne Parrish, "Delectable Mountains" by Struthers Burt, "Young Anarchy" by Philip Gibbs, and "Cherons" by Leonard Bacon and non-fiction, "The Story of Philosophy" by Will Durant; "Napoleon" by Emil Ludwig; "War Birds" by an unknown author; "Blindfolded" by Lewis, famous author of "Main Street," "Mantrap" and "Rabbit," whose eagerly awaited "preacher novel," "Elmer Gantry" will be published early in March by the Harcourt, Brace & Co., is selling for Europe Feb. 2.

Mystery story readers have a treat in store for them this season in the book, "The Eye of Lucifer" by the popular mystery story writer, Frederic Van De Water, according to announcement made by the Appleton Publishing Co.

The O. Henry Memorial Prize Award Committee of the Society of Arts and Sciences recently made the following awards for the best short stories by American authors for the past year: to Wilbur Daniel Steele for "Bubbles" which appeared in the August number of the Harper's Magazine; to Sherwood Anderson for "The Heart of the Woods" in the September American Mercury; and to Albert Richard Weston for "Command" in the April Sea Stories.

Willis Cather's "My Mortal Enemy" tied for first place with "Bubbles" but the award was granted the latter as Mrs. Cather's story had been printed in book form.

"Essays and Addresses on the Philosophy of Religion" is the title of a new volume in which Baron Friedrich Von Hügel, the author, discusses the place of the church in modern society, the idea of God, the influence of religion on morals, the troublesome problem of suffering and God and other subjects of religious interest. The book is published by E. P. Dutton & Co.

Paul de Kruif, author of "Microbe Hunters," discovered on a recent trip to Washington one of the heroes of Walter Reed's famous yellow fever test, working as a night watchman. Dr. Reed's test completely proved to the world that yellow fever is transmitted by mosquitoes and by no other means. It will be recalled by those who knew this romantic story that Dr. Reed called for volunteers from the American Army to prove his contention. Some of the volunteers slept in the garments and bed-clothes of patients who had died of yellow fever, and were completely protected from mosquitoes. These failed to contract the disease. Others lived in sanitary and immaculate quarters and were exposed to mosquitoes. The men in this group became seriously ill of yellow fever and one died.

There is a movement on foot, due to the publicity given to "Microbe Hunters," to have these volunteers pensioned by the United States government as a proper reward for their heroism.

Virgil Gilbert in his new novel, "The Way of Romance," published this week by Appleton, writes from a thorough knowledge of the subject matter and setting as he did in his former book, "The Romance of the Last Crusade." The new story tells of the adventures of a young Englishman who with a few hundred dollars, a good wardrobe and some experience in amateur dramatics comes to America to repulse broken fortunes.

Mr. Gilbert's own experience as an actor in "The O. Henry" and other plays in America, enables him to describe with a keen and sympathetic pen the life of a young struggling actor in New York. He has seen life and adventures, he has known romance and the writer of it with delightful skill in his novel "The Way of Romance."

The new building is three stories at the front and two stories at the rear. The Kresge company will occupy the entire building, using the basement for storage purposes and possibly some branches of its sales departments. The entire first floor is to be used as a sales room and a restaurant and rest rooms for the employees will be located on the second floor.

MOCK TRIAL FEATURE OF KIWANIS MEETING

G. Farr Lurie, R. F. Fletcher, J. C. Woods and Jay Vaughan Principals

G. Farr Lurie, R. F. Fletcher and J. C. Woods were on trial in the mock trial before Municipal Judge William R. Martin at the meeting of the Marion Kiwanis Club at Hotel Harding.

The three faced Judge Martin as defendants in a case brought by Jay Vaughan who sought to collect $100,000 from the three for damages claimed as a result of an alleged operation he underwent at the Kiwanis Club three weeks ago.

John H. Clark represented Vaughan before the court and Hector Younsz battled for the rights of the defendants. In his opening address to the court Clark suggested that the jury be selected from the "most ignorant" men in the club, as a trial jury, according to law, was supposed to know absolutely nothing of the case they were to hear.

Judge Martin ruled that the plaintiff could select four jurors and the defense

two. Clark selected K. H. Marshall, principal of Harding High School; W. E. Orutt, principal of Central Junior High School; R. A. Garvin, principal of Vernon Heights Junior High School, and Carl W. Lerner, coal dealer, as his four jurors. Young chose A. L. Kette, insurance man, and Charles W. McClain, of the McClain Clock Co., as his two jurors.

Vaughan took the stand and claimed that the defendants first talked him into being ill, then took his "roll" of $5,000, operated him for a fictitious ailment, and charged him $75,000 for an operation which he never got, but which he paid for. Vaughan asked return of his $5,000 "roll," the cost of the operation.

and $20,000 damages for his reputation, which he said had suffered. Dr. J. W. Jolley was called as the next witness and when asked what he found on later examination of Vaughan said:

"Not much."

R. F. Fletcher took the stand for the defense and claimed that the surgeon who operated knew their business, and had removed Vaughan's appendix.

Vaughan countered with the assertion that the last time he looked it was still there.

The case went to the jury after considerable haranguing by opposing counsel.

Cross-patch tempers

She knew people were beginning to notice how irritable she was—but she simply couldn't help it. . . . How could she be gay when throbbing eyes and endless headaches made up her day?

What a vicious thing constipation! It wrecks vitality. It saps beauty. It kills the brightest heart with despair. What a blessing there is a safe, sure relief from this curse! Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to relieve constipation—pleasantly, permanently. More—do prevent it.

Why ALL-BRAN is better than part-bran

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN absorbs a great deal of moisture which it carries through the digestive system. At the same time it gently stimulates the intestine—cleaning, purifying, removing poisons and wastes. Being 100% bulk, ALL-BRAN accomplishes 100% results. How different from part-bran products, which contain too little bulk to be effective—often nothing is accomplished. That is why doctors recommend ALL-BRAN.

Don't trust habit-forming pills!

Contrast ALL-BRAN with pills and drugs—that become useless unless the dose is constantly increased! ALL-BRAN is delicious with milk or cream, and add fruits or honey. Let it work a few moments to bring out its nut-like flavor. Sprinkle ALL-BRAN in soups. Recipes on every package.

Don't risk part-bran substitutes. Insist on genuine Kellogg's—the original ALL-BRAN. Sold by all grocers. Served by diners, hotels, restaurants. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.
